NIGHT EDITION INDICTED MEN FURNISH BAIL.

Ex-Supt. Brady and Capt.
Killilea Charged with Bribery.

PARK BOARD CONSPIRACY.

Clausen, Straus and Tappen Accused of Asphalt Contract Favoritism.

HANS S. BEATTIE A COMPLAINANT.

He Charges Patrolmen Thrall, Cassidy and Miley with Attempted Extortion.

The eight men who were indicted yesterday by the Extraordinary Grand Jury of the Court of Oyer and Terminer were placed under arrest this morning.
They are:

GEORGE C. CLAUSEN, formerly a Park Commissioner.
THOMAS F. BRADY, formerly Superintendent of Buildings.
NATHAN STRAUS, formerly a Park Commissioner.
ABRAHAM S. TAPPEN, formerly a Park Commissioner.

THOMAS J. BRADY, formerly Superintendent of Buildings.
Police Captain THOMAS KILLILEA.
Patrolman HUGH CASSIDY.
Patrolman JOHN H. THRALL.
Patrolman EDWARD F. MILEY.

Supt. Byrnes issued an order at 10:30 o'clock this morning, suspending Capt.

McAvoy, who escorted them down to the District-Attorney's office.

Later in the day Capt. Killilea and Patrolmen Cassidy Thrall and Miley called at headquarters and turned over their shields to Supt. Byrnes.

The three ex-Park Commissioners are charged with misdemeanor, and their bail had been fixed last night at $1,500 each.

Ex-Supt. Brady is charged with bribery. His bail was fixed last night at $10,000.

Capt. Killilea is also charged with bribery, and his bail is $10,000.

The three policemen are charged with attempted extortion, and their bail has been fixed at $3,000 each.

Nathan Straus offered his brother, Isidor Straus, as his bondsman, who gave property for One Hundred and Fifth street and Western Boulevard, valued at $150,000. It is not mortgaged.

Ex-President Tappen, of the Park Board, gave as his bondsman George C. Clausen.
He qualified in $20,000, and gave the house at 170 East Seventy-first street as security.

Ex-Commissioner Clausen wanted to offer Mr. Tappen as his bondsman, but the bail clerk objected.

"We cannot take a lawyer as a bond-man," he said.

"I am out of that business now," replied Mr. Tappen. "It was fifty-one years ago that I committed the offense of being admitted to the bar, and perhaps he might excuse that." He offered his house, 506 Kingsbridge road.

Tappen Not Accepted as Bondsman.

It was finally decided, however, not to accept Mr. Tappen. Mr. Clausen then had his brother, Charles C. Clausen, go on the bond. The latter gave a house, 43 East Seventy-fourth street, valued at $20,000.

Police Capt. Killilea had a bondsman in the person of Timothy Donovan, a real estate dealer, of 332 West Forty-sixth street. He qualified in $25,000, and gave a lot on Seventy-second street, near Avenue A.

Ex-Superintendent of Buildings Thomas J. Brady offered as bondsman Michael J. O'Reilly, a builder, of 121 East Forty-fourth street, who gave houses at 115 and 117 East Eighty-second street, worth $150,000 and mortgaged for $50,000.

Frank J. Thornton, a restaurant-keeper, of 125 East One Hundred and Twenty-eighth street, went on the bond of Patrolman Edward Miley. He gave a house and lot at 140 East One Hundred and Twenty-fourth street, valued at $14,000.

Big Crowd Present.

In anticipation of seeing the eight men brought in as prisoners, a large crowd gathered at an early hour outside the Criminal Court Building inside, however, everything was comparatively quiet. The only sign of life in the District-Attorney's office was the presence of the two clerks whose duty it was to make out the bail bonds.

It was shortly after 10 o'clock when the men were escorted to the District-Attorney's office.

NO BAIL FOR WILDE. EASY FOR THE BOOKS.

Craven Demeanor During the Proceedings in Bow Street.

Arrest of Taylor, His Supposed Accomplice in Crime.

Testimony of the Boy Parker, Who Says He Has Reformed.

LONDON, April 6.—Crowds of people besieged the neighborhood of Bow street early this morning, and the Bow Street Police Court was jammed with spectators immediately after the doors were opened. Among those who succeeded in pressing their way into court was one good-looking middle-aged woman.

All were anxious to see Oscar Wilde, whose arrest yesterday, following close upon the sensational termination of his suit for libel against the Marquis of Queensberry, is discussed on all sides.

Wilde passed the night in a cell. Mr.
C. F. Gill, who was Mr. Edward M.
Carson's junior counsel in the defense of the Marquis of Queensberry, acted as Prosecutor to-day for the Treasury Department.

Sir John Bridge, the presiding magistrate, took his seat on the bench at 11 o'clock. The doors leading to the cells were then opened, and Wilde was seen approaching with stately step and carrying a silk hat in his hand.

When he reached the centre of the prisoners' dock, Wilde calmly deposited his hat on the seat, bowed to Sir John Bridge, folded his arms and leaned on the rail of the dock in the same inassurable manner which he displayed while on the witness-stand in the Old Bailey.

Mr. Gill said that he appeared to prosecute the prisoner on a series of charges of inciting boys to crime and of committing acts of indecency.

The prosecutor then related how, in 1895, when Wilde was staying at the Savoy Hotel, Alfred Taylor, who was arrested to-day, acted as procurer for Wilde, who repeatedly visited Taylor's house. Continuing, Mr. Gill said that the prosecution proposed to show how Taylor approached a young man named Parker, who was sitting at a position, and his brother, a groom.

They finally consented, and it was arranged that they should be introduced to Wilde at a dinner which he would give in a private room at Kitter's restaurant.

Parker was then called to the stand, but the proceedings were interrupted by the official announcement that Taylor had been arrested. A few moments later Taylor was brought into court, and was placed in the dock beside Wilde, who nodded to him.

Parker was then examined and related at length, giving the most minute details, his intimacy with Wilde.

While Parker was giving this testimony Wilde moved restlessly in the dock and passed his hands across his face.

Parker added that he was arrested with Taylor on the raid in 1895 on the house at Fitzroy square, but he claimed he had since abandoned his evil life.

Counsel for Wilde asked leave to postpone the cross-examination of Parker, as the evidence had taken them by surprise.

Parker was then bound over to testify at the trial of Wilde, which is to take place in the Old Bailey.

Parker was deadly pale when concluding his testimony, and asked to be allowed to take a seat as he was not feeling well.

The woman previously referred to as having entered the court-room was the next witness. She gave evidence that Mrs. Grant, and said that she let rooms to Taylor, who, she added, was visited by a number of young men.

When Mrs. Grant was asked to state the ages of these young men, she replied that they were from sixteen years of age and upward. The statement caused a sensation in court.

Mrs. Grant was then asked if she could identify Wilde as a visitor to Taylor's rooms. She replied that she could not.

Thereupon Sir John Bridge said,
"Wilde, stand up."

Wilde arose, but the witness was still unable to recognize him. But, replying to counsel's questions, she said that she remembered Taylor addressing one visitor as "Oscar."

Replying to further questions, Mrs.
Grant said that Taylor's rooms were well furnished and highly perfumed.
Taylor, she added, dressed effeminately.
Before Taylor left Mrs. Grant's rooms a sergeant of police once went to his apartments and secretly watched Taylor's proceedings.

Sir John Bridge asked Taylor if he desired to ask the witness any questions.
The prisoner replied: "Not yet."

Alfred Woods, a slim, nice-looking youth, was then called to the stand. He testified that Taylor introduced him to Wilde in January, 1895, and that he, the witness, had visited Wilde at his own house, while the latter's family was at Torquay. The witness added that he was intoxicated at the time, as Wilde had previously given him champagne, whisky and hook.

While Wilde, Oscar Wilde's brother, intervened and listened to the remainder of the evidence from the back of the room.

Continuing, Woods said that Wilde afterwards gave him a deal of money and a watch and chain. Woods also said that soon afterwards, he told Taylor that he wanted to "get away from Wilde and these people."

Counsel, interrupting, said: "Let us deal with the case of Wilde alone. But, I believe that there were other people present at these gatherings."

"Yes. One or two of them have left the country," answered Woods.

Woods added that Taylor told Wilde that he, the witness, wanted to go to America, whereupon Wilde asked to
